FOREGROUND

16 NOW Timothy A. Schuler, Editor

New tools help early childhood educators see the change of nature-based play; London's Royal Parks are letting things go, a little bit; a new comprehensive tree survey could help diversify urban tree canopies, and more.

30 PLANTS

Home Grown by Jared Brey

The clipped and orderly mid-Atlantic suburbs are slowly coming around to the idea of native plants, thanks in part to Refugia's persuasive approach to residential design.

44 GOODS Laurie A. Shuster, Editor

On the Surface

The latest elements to help landscape designs come out on top.

FEATURES

54 Trash to Treasure by Jonathan Lerner

Residents of East New York have been promised a new park over a pair of landfills for years. With a hard push from the governor and an award-winning design by Michael Van Valkenburgh Associates, a new state park to honor the civil rights legend Shirley Chisholm has arrived.

THE BACK

80 Storm Warnings by Laurie A. Shuster

The landscape architecture profession in Puerto Rico has ideas about defending the island against hurricanes. Now if they could just get the federal government to listen.

92 BOOKS Mimi Zeiger, Editor

Right Plant, Any Place by Jack Ahern, FASLA

A review of Plants in Design: A Guide to Designing with Southern Landscape Plants, by Brad E. Davis, ASLA, and David Nichols, ASLA.

120 BACKSTORY

A brief for a natural pool let Roche+Roche Landscape Architecture dig deep.
